HOAGLAND'S
NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER
HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive
Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.
He respectfully refers to the following
CARD.
Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.
It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.
It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

SPEECH OF GOVERNOR SEWARD
AT SITKA,
THURSDAY, AUGUST, 12TH, 1869

Citizens of Alaska, Fellow Citizens of the United States: You have pressed me to meet you in public assembly once before I leave Alaska. It would be sheer affectation to pretend to doubt your sincerity in making this request and capriciously ungrateful to refuse it, after having received so many and varied hospitalities from all sorts and conditions of men. It is not an easy task, however, to speak in a manner worthy of your consideration, while I am living constantly on ship-board, as you all know, and am occupied intently in searching out whatever is sublime or beautiful or peculiar or useful. On the other hand, it is altogether natural on your part to say, "You have looked on Alaska, what do you think of it?" Unhappily I have seen too little of Alaska to answer the question satisfactorily. The entire coast line of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, is 10,000 miles, while the coast line of Alaska alone, including the islands, is 26,000 miles. The portion of the Territory which lies east of the peninsula, including islands, is 120 miles wide; the western portion, including the Aleutian Islands, expands to a breadth of 2,200 miles. The entire land area, including islands, is 577,390 statute square miles. We should think a foreigner very presumptuous who should presume to give the world an opinion of the whole of the United States of America, after he had merely looked in from his steamer at Plymouth and Boston Harbor, or had run up the Hudson river to the Highlands, or had ascended the Delaware to Trenton, or the James river to Richmond, or the Mississippi no farther than Memphis. My observation of Alaska thus far, has hardly been more comprehensive. I entered the Territory at the Portland Canal, made my way through the narrow passages of the Prince of Wales Archipelago, thence through Peril and Chatham Straits and Lynn Channel and up the Chilcat river to the base of Fairweather, from which latter place I have returned through Clarence Straits to sojourn a few days in your beautiful bay under the shadows of the Baranoff Hills and Mount Edgecombe. Limited, however, as my opportunities have been, I will, without further apology, give you the impressions I have received.

Of course I speak first of the skies of Alaska. It seems to be assumed in the case of Alaska that a country which extends through 58° of longitude and embraces portions as well of the Arctic as of the Temperate Zone, unlike all other regions so situated, has not several climates, but only one. The weather of this one broad climate of Alaska is severely criticised in outside circles for being too wet and too cold. Nevertheless it must be a fastidious person who complains of climates in which while the eagle delights to soar, the humming bird does not disdain to flutter. I shall speak only of the particular climate here which I know. My visit here happens to fall within the month of August. Not only have the skies been sufficiently bright and serene to give me a perfect view, under the 60th parallel, of the total eclipse of the sun and of the evening star at the time of the sun's obscuration, but I have also enjoyed more clear than there have been cloudy days, and in the early mornings and in the late evenings peculiar to the season, I have lost myself in admiration of skies adorned with sapphire and gold as richly as those which are reflected by the Mediterranean. Of all the moonlights in the world, commend me to those which light up the Archipelago of the North Pacific Ocean. Fogs have sometimes detained me longer on the Hudson and on Long Island Sound than now on the waters of the North Pacific. In saying this I do not mean to say that rain and fog are unfrequent here. The Russian pilot George, whom you all know, expressed my conviction on this matter exactly when he said to me, "Oh, yes, Mr. Seward, we do have changeable weather here sometimes as they do in the other States." I might amend the expression by adding that the weather here is a little more changeable. It must be confessed at least that it is an honest climate, for it makes no pretensions to constancy. If, however, you have fewer bright sunrises and glowing sunsets than Southern latitudes enjoy, you are favored on the other hand with more frequent and more magnificent displays of the aurora and the rainbow. The thermometer tells the whole case when it reports that the summer is colder and the winter is warmer in Alaska than in New York and Washington. It results from the nature of such a climate that the earth prefers to support the fir, the spruce, the pine, the hemlock and other evergreens, rather than deciduous trees, and to furnish grasses and esculent roots, rather than the cereals of drier and hotter climates.

I have mingled freely with the multifarious population, the Tongass, the Stickeens, the Cakes, the Hydahs, the Sitkas, the Kootznoos and the Chilcats, as well as with the traders, the soldiers, the seamen and the settlers of various nationalities, English, Swedish, Russian and American, and I have seen all around me only persons enjoying robust and exuberant health. Manhood of every race and condition everywhere exhibits activity and energy, while infancy seems exempt from disease and age relieved from pain.

It is next in order to speak of the rivers and seas of Alaska. The rivers are broad, shallow and rapid, while the seas are deep but tranquil. Mr. Sumner, in his elaborate and magnificent oration, although he spoke only from historical accounts, has not exaggerated—no man can exaggerate—the marine treasures of the Territory. Besides the whale, which everywhere and at all times is seen enjoying his robust exercise, and the sea-otter, the fur-seal, hair-seal, and the walrus, found in the waters which embosom the western islands—those waters as well as the seas of the Eastern Archipelago are found teeming with the salmon, cod and other fishes adapted to the support of human and animal life. Indeed, what I have seen here has almost made me a convert to the theory of some naturalists that the waters of the globe are filled with stores for the sustenance of animal life surpassing the available productions of the land.

It must be remembered that the coast range of mountains which begins in Mexico is continued into the Territory and invades the seas of Alaska. Hence it is that in the islands on the mainland, so far as I have explored it, we find ourselves everywhere in the immediate presence of black hills or foothills as they are variously called, and that these foot hills are overtopped by ridges of snow-capped mountains. These snow-capped mountains are manifestly of volcanic origin, and they have been subjected through an indefinite period to atmospheric abrasion and disintegration. Hence they have assumed all conceivable shapes and forms. In some places they are serrated into sharp, angular peaks, and in other places they appear architecturally arranged so as to present cloud-capped castles, towers, domes and minarets. The mountain sides are furrowed with deep and straight ravines down which the thawing fields of ice and snow are precipitated, generally in the month of May, with such a vehemence as to have produced in every valley immense level plains of intervale land. These plains as well as the sides of the mountains almost to the summits are covered with forests so dense and dark as to be impenetrable except to wild beasts and savage hunters men. On the lowest intervale land the cottonwood grows. It seems to be the species of poplar which is known in the Atlantic States as the Balm of Gilead, and which is dwarfed on the Rocky Mountains. Here it takes on such large dimensions that the Indian shapes out of a single trunk even his great war canoe which safely bears over the deepest waters a phalanx of sixty warriors. These imposing trees always appear to rise out of a jungle of elder, alder, crab apple and other fruit-bearing shrubs and bushes. The short and slender birch which, sparcely scattered, marks the verge of vegetation in Labrador, has not yet been reached by the explorers of Alaska. The birch tree sometimes appears upon the river side, upon the level above the cottonwood, and is generally found a comely and stately tree. The forests of Alaska, however, consist mainly neither of shrubs nor of birch, nor of cottonwood, but as I have already intimated, of the pine, the cedar, the cypress, the spruce, the fir, the larch and the hemlock. These forests begin almost at the waters edge, and they rise with regular gradation to a height of 2,000 feet. The trees no where dwarfed or diminutive attain the highest dimensions in sunny exposures in the deep canyons or gorges of the mountains. The cedar sometimes called the yellow cedar, and sometimes the fragrant cedar, was long ago imported into China as an ornamental wood and it now furnishes the majestic beams and pillars with which the richer and more ambitious native chief delights to construct his rude but spacious hall or palatial residence, and upon which he carves in rude symbolical imagery the heraldry of his tribe and achievements of his nation. No beam or pillar or spar or mast or plank is ever required in either the land or the naval architecture of any civilized state greater in length and width than the trees which can be hewn down on the coasts of the Islands and rivers here, and conveyed directly thence by navigation. A few gardens, fields and meadows have been attempted by natives in some of the settlements, and by the soldiers at the military posts with most encouraging results. Nor must we forget that the native grasses ripening late in a humid climate preserve their nutrative properties though exposed, while the climate is so mild that cattle and horses require but slight provision of shelter during the winter.

Such is the island and coast portion of Eastern Alaska. Kla-kautch, the Chilcat, who is known and feared by the Indians throughout the whole Territory and who is a very intelligent chief, informs me that beyond the mountain range which intervenes between the Chilcat and the Yukon rivers you descend into a plain unbroken by hills or mountains, very fertile, in a genial climate, and as far as he could learn, of boundless extent. We have similar information from those who have traversed the interior from the shore of the Portland canal to the upper branches of the Yukon. We have reason, therefore, to believe that beyond the coast range of mountains in Alaska we shall find an extension of the rich and habitable valley lands of Oregon, Washington Territory and British Columbia.

After what I have already said I may assume myself from expatiating on the animal productions of the forest. The elk and the deer are so plenty as to be undervalued for food or skins by natives as well as strangers. The bear of many families, black, grizzly and cinnamon, the mountain sheep, inestimable for his fleece, the wolf, the fox, the beaver, the otter, the mink, the raccoon, the martin, the ermine, the squirrel, grey, black, brown and flying, are among the land fur-bearing animals. The furs thus found have been the chief element for more than a hundred years, of the profitable commerce of the Hudson's Bay Company, whose mere property privileges seem even at this late day too costly to find a ready purchaser. This fur trade, together with the sea fur trade within the Territory, were the sole basis alike of Russian commerce and empire on this continent. This commerce was so large and important as to induce the governments of Russia and China to build and maintain a town for carrying on its exchanges in Tartary on the border of the two empires. It is well understood that the supply of furs in Alaska has not diminished, while the demand for them in China and elsewhere has immensely increased.

I fear that we must confess to a failure of ice as an element of territorial wealth, at least as far as this immediate region is concerned. I find that the Russian American Company, whose monopoly was abolished by the Treaty of Acquisition, depended for its ice exclusively upon the small lake or natural pond which furnishes the power for your saw mill in this town, and that this dependence has now failed by reason of the increasing mildness of the winter. The California Ice Company are now trying the small lakes of Kodiac, and certainly I wish them success. I think it is not yet ascertained whether glacier ice is pure and practical for commerce. If it is, the world may be supplied from the glaciers which, suspended from the regions of the clouds stand forth, in the majesty of ever wasting and ever renewed transformation mountains upon the banks of the Stickeen and Chilcat rivers, and the shores of Cross Sound.

Alaska has been as yet but imperfectly explored. But enough is known to assure us that it possesses treasures of what are called the baser ores, equal to those of any other region of the continent. We have Copper Island and Copper River, so named as the places where the natives, before the period of the Russian discovery, had procured the metal from which they fabricated instruments of war and legendary shields. In regard to iron, the question seems to be not where it can be found, but whether there is any place where it does not exist. Mr. Davidson, of the Coast Survey, invited me to go up to him at the station he had taken up the Chilcat River, to make his observations of the eclipse, by writing me that he had discovered an iron mountain there. When I came there, I found that, very properly, he had been studying the heavens so busily that he had but cursorily examined the earth under his feet; that it was not a single iron mountain that he had discovered, but a range of hills, the very dust of which adheres to the magnet, while the range itself, 2,000 feet high, extends along the east bank of the river, thirty miles. Limestone and marble crop out on the banks of the same river and in many other places. Coal beds, accessible to navigation, are found on Kootznoo. It is said, however, that the concentrated resin which the mineral contains, renders it too inflammable to be safely used by steamers. In any case it would seem calculated to supply the fuel requisite for the manufacture of iron. What seems to be excellent cannel coal is also found in the Prince of Wales Archipelago. There are also mines at Cook's Inlet. Placer and quartz gold mining is pursued under many social disadvantages upon the Stickeen and elsewhere, with a degree of success which, while it does not warrant us in assigning a superiority in that respect to the Territory, does nevertheless warrant us in regarding gold mining as an established and reliable resource.

It would argue inexcusable insensibility if I should fail to speak of the scenery which, in the course of my voyage, has seemed to pass like a varied and magnificent panorama before me. The exhibition did not, indeed, open within the Territory. It broke upon me first when I had passed Cape Flattery and entered the Straits of Fuca, which separate British Columbia from Washington Territory. It widened as I passed along the shore of Puget Sound, expanded in the waters which divide Vancouver from the continent, and finally spread itself out into a magnificent Archipelago, stretching through the entire Gulf of Alaska and closing under the shade of Mounts Fairweather and St. Elias. Nature has furnished to this majestic picture the only suitable border which could be conceived by lifting the coast range mountains to an exalted height and clothing them with eternal snows and crystalline glaciers.

It remains only to speak of man and of society in Alaska. Until the present moment the country has been exclusively inhabited and occupied by some thirty or more Indian tribes. I incline to doubt the popular classification of these tribes upon the assumption that they have descended from diverse races. Climate and other circumstances have indeed produced some differences of manners and customs between the Aleuts, the Koloschians, and the interior continental tribes. But all of them are manifestly of Mongol origin. Although they have preserved no common traditions, all alike indulge in tastes, wear a physiognomy, and are imbued with sentiments peculiarly noticed in Japan and China. Savage communities, no less than civilized nations, require space for subsistence, whether they depend for it upon the land or upon the sea. In savage communities especially, an increase of population disproportioned to the supplies of the country occupied, necessitates subdivision and remote colonization. Oppression and cruelty occur even more frequently among barbarians than among civilized men. Nor are ambition and faction less inherent in the one condition than in the other. From these causes it has happened that the 25,000 Indians in Alaska are found permanently divided into so many insignificant nations. These nations, jealous, ambitious and violent, could in no case exist long in the same region without mutually affording what, in every case, to each party seems just cause of war. War between savages becomes the private cause of the several families which are afflicted with the loss of their members. Such a war can never be composed until each family which has suffered receives an indemnity in blankets, adjusted according to an imaginary tariff, or in the failure of such compensation, secures the death of one or more enemies as an atonement for the injury it has sustained. The enemy captured—whether by superior force or strategy—either receives no quarter or submits for himself and his progeny to perpetual slavery. It has thus happened that the Indian tribes of Alaska have never either confederated or formed permanent alliances and that even at this late day in the presence of superior power exercised by the United States Government they live in regard to each other in a state of enforcement and doubtful truce. It is manifest that under these circumstances they must steadily decline in numbers and unhappily this decline is accelerated by their borrowing ruinous vices from the white man. Such as the natives of Alaska are, they are nevertheless, in a practical sense the only laborers at present in the Territory. The white man comes among them from London, from St. Petersburg, from Boston, from New York, from San Francisco, and from Victoria, not to fish (if we except alone the whale fishery) or to hunt, but simply to buy what fish and what peltries, ice, wood, lumber and coal the Indians have secured under the superintendence of temporary agents or factors. When we consider how greatly most of the tribes are reduced in numbers, and how precarious their vocations are, we shall cease to regard them as indolent or incapable, and on the contrary we we shall more deeply regret than ever before, that a people so gifted by nature, so vigorous and energetic, and withal so docile and gentle in their intercourse with the white man, can neither be preserved as a distinct social community nor incorporated into our society. The Indian tribes will do here as they seem to have done in Washington Territory and British Columbia. They will merely serve the turn until civilized white men come.

You, the citizens of Sitka, are the pioneers, the advanced guard of the future population of Alaska, and you naturally ask when, from whence, and how soon reinforements shall come, and what are the signs and guarantees of their coming? This question, with all its minute and searching interrogations, has been asked by the pioneers of every State and Territory of which the American Union is now composed, and the history of those States and Territories furnishes the complete, conclusive and satisfactory answer. Emigrants go to every infant State and Territory in obedience to the great natural law that obliges every man to seek subsistence, and invites adventurous men to seek fortune, where it is most easily obtained, and this is always in the new and uncultivated regions. They go from every State and Territory, and from every foreign nation in America, Europe and Asia, because no established and populous State or nation can guarantee subsistence and fortune to all who demand them among its inhabitants.

The guarantees and signs of their coming to Alaska are found in the resources of the Territory, which I have attempted to describe, and in the condition of society in other parts of the world. Some men seek other climes for health and for pleasure. Alaska invites the former class by a climate singularly salubrious and the latter class by scenery which surpasses in sublimity that of either the Alps, the Apennines, the Alleghanies or the Rocky mountains. Emigrants from our own States, from Europe and from Asia will not be slow in finding out that fortunes are to be gained by pursuing here the occupations which have so successfully sustained a race of untutored men. Civilization and improvement are making more rapid advances in our day than at any former period. The rising States and nations on this continent, the European nations, and even those of Eastern Asia have exhausted or are exhausting their own forests and mines and are soon to become largely dependent upon those of the Pacific. The entire region of Oregon, Washington Territory, British Columbia and Alaska, seem thus destined to become a shipyard

Democracy and High Taxes.

[From the Eugene Journal.]

When the Union Republican party defeated the Democracy of Lane county seven years ago, and took charge of affairs, they found the county deeply in debt, with scrip selling at 75 cents on the dollar, and the business of the Clerk and other officers in such a state of confusion that it took more than a year to get everything straightened up But under the administration of Risdon, County Judge, Small, and Skinner, Clerk, and Brittain and Haley, Sheriff, the official business and records were straightened up order was brought out of confusion—all indebtedness incurred by the Democrats was paid off—and the county was again turned over to the Democrats, by the votes of Missouri guerrilas, with money in the treasury, scrip at par, and everything in a prosperous condition, with a tax levy of 11 1-2 mills. Democracy has had control three years, and, with no outstanding scrip to pay off as the Republicans had, and with no additional expense to meet, they increased the tax-levy the second year to 14 mills, emptied the treasury, and incurred a public debt of no one knows how much, so that scrip is now down to 85 cents on the dollar. They not only increased the tax-levy 2 1-2 mills, which alone brought in a large amount, but the increase in the value of property in the county, and the rate of assessment, added several thousand dollars more to the taxes, making the sum total very much larger than was collected under Republican ruler In addition to this, they drew out the State Treasury about $5,000, placed there by the Republicans to pay our State tax, and expended all that, leaving the county in debt for the full amount, so that this year will increase the tax to about 18 or 20 mills, or increase the public debt to such an extent that scrip will be down again to almost nothing, and it will take years to get out of debt. During this time, while thousands on thousands of dollars have been paid into the treasury, by the hard working people of this county, more than were paid by them when the Republicans were in power, there has been no additional expense to meet. No new Court House has been built—salaries of officers are no higher, and there are no more officers to pay, than before.

T[illegible] what becomes of the money? The county was out of debt when the Democrats took the helm, except the $5,000 State tax, and the greenbacks were deposited to meet that, so that the conversion of them into coin would have taken but a small additional sum Thousands of dollars more than the Republicans collected when they were paying off old debts, have been collected and expended by the Democrats who have not paid off a dollar, but have been constantly [illegible] the people in debt These are facts to which we call the attention of Democrats—not the little clique who are getting rich out of the people—but the hard working tax-payers throughout the county. If Democratic officers cost the people double as much now as the Union Republicans did, and the cost of keeping up the county organization is no more now than it was then, why is it? They have collected a great deal more tax than their predecessors. That the records will show. They have spent this money. That the empty treasury will prove. They have run the county in debt. The scrip that sells for 85 cents on the dollar [illegible] fact. Is this the result of incompetency and, wise management, or does it [illegible] from some other cause? We understand well enough that whenever Democrats get into office to [illegible] go up, but not [illegible] familiar with the workings of the party we can't understand why this is so. But the fact is undeniable, and it affords a very good reason why Democrats [illegible] should [illegible] to vote for men who [illegible] of lightening their burdens continually add to them. Josephine county has been under Democratic control till it is so [illegible] debt it will take about half the property in the county to pay it off. This year the tax will be about 18 mills or $7.50 on the $1[illegible] the [illegible] still [illegible]ing. The [illegible] are coming to [illegible] will not go there. This [illegible] and a few months [illegible] will bury [illegible] so deeply in debt that it will take [illegible] to remove the last [illegible]

[illegible] In the [illegible] of Aug[illegible] 18th, we find the [illegible] and natural [illegible] of the way in which President Grant has disposed of his [illegible] leisure. We [illegible] it to a general and careful reading:

The asinine press seem [illegible] vording to a spiteful, [illegible] way to criticise Pr[illegible] t Grant for availing himself of the Summer vacation to indulge in [illegible] social intercourse with the people at the watering places and elsewhere. It is not question that the President seeks this recreation in an [illegible] manner, but it seems to be assumed that he ought to sweltter at the White House, or, if that unhealthy location proved too hot, [illegible] snatch a hurried rest at night at the Soldiers' Home, haunting Washington by day. The only President without recreation other than an occasional attendance at a Washington theatre) was Mr. Lincoln. The Copperheads not only did not thank him for his unremitting Herculean toil, but on [illegible] occasions of the solitary occasions on which he sought to withdraw from the labors of the Government to waylay and murder him—an ambush [illegible] in which they at last succeeded. With the exception of Mr. Lincoln, every President has made tours of recreation through the country. Andrew Johnson amused himself in the only way he was able, by swinging around the circle on a drinking tour, making stupid and very maudlin speeches. Mr. Buchanan resorted every year to [illegible] and so his favorite place. President Pierce [illegible] the Crystal Palace at New York, and went into Summer quarters at Cape Island. President Van Buren was fond, even to flunkeyism, of aristocratic people. President Jackson spent many weeks of his vacation at the Rip-Raps, Fortress Monroe. The President most ostentatiously addicted to displaying himself on public tours, with a pomp and hauteur that at the present day would be oppressive and offensive was Washington himself. He esteemed it as part of his official duty to make formal imperial progresses around the country, and part of the official duty of everybody who came in his way to receive him with punctilious deference and parade. President Grant's military achievements throw those of the First President far in the background. His civil career has been marked by less pretension but not less ability, judgment or prudence than that of Washington. It cannot be [illegible] improper that he should mingle with the people in a manner neither mean nor ostentatious, neither intrusive nor vulgar, but with the natural and unaffected pleasure of a well poised gentleman among his social equals. He observes the characters and studies the opinions of all, but reserves judiciously the expression of his own. This certainly is a characteristic of the most successful statesmen and executive rulers of all ages. At the White House he could only meet politicians. At Long Branch, New York, Boston, Newport, Saratoga, he meets the men of business of all classes at the East. With those of the West and South he is more familiar than any President who ever preceded him. Who can doubt that the information he is thus accumulating is of infinite value to him? Fortunate it would have been if his predecessor had spent his time thus, instead of organizing policies at Washington in ignorance of popular opinion. Moreover, what public need is being neglected? Were our finances, foreign relations, Indian affairs [illegible] construction, Bureau or revenue management ever advancing more prosperously, or being reformed more satisfactorily, or being reformed more rapidly? Was there ever more vigor or less waste; more fidelity and less corruption in our administration? What Grant's presence was needed during the eight long years of war, and of the perils of reconstruction, was he ever absent from his post? Did he ever seek the capital for promotion, or come to it at all from the time he entered the army as Regimental Staff Quartermaster until he was called there as General-in-Chief of all the armies? Did his stars or staff then figure at the watering-places? Never. The elements of his success were then military. He moved freely among all his officers and men, from Sherman and Sheridan down to Surgeons, Quartermasters and privates. He studied the problem in all its parts and made no mistakes His problem is how a financial one. He is moving among men of business, of industry, and who, through these resources, have earned their summer months of leisure. He sees a very great number of them. And if he learns nothing else he at least learns them. He does well and wisely. Before we find fault with it, let us see what evil comes from it.

The Military Department of Alaska.

[From the N. Y Times, Aug. 11th]

It is said, on high authority, that Major Gen Thomas, who lately succeeded General Halleck in Command of the Military Division of the Pacific, will go to Alaska, with the intention of abolishing the whole departmental command in those regions, and reducing the garrison to a two company post at St. Paul's and St. George's Islands. "This," adds the military organ which makes the announcement, "with a cutter, will be entirely adequate for the protection of the seal fisheries, which are the only [illegible] for the presence of troops there at all."

The striking difference between the view of the present and that of the late Commander of the Division of the Pacific, as to the importance of garrisoning Alaska, is very suggestive. The one was, apparently, a theoretical calculation, the other a practical one, the one looked to possible "strategic combinations," the other to just what was needed There is a historic as well as a humorous significance in this sudden fall of Alaska in military importance. It recalls the old days of the war, when Gen. Halleck was so struck with the strategic value of Harper's Ferry that no force seemed too large to detach from operations in the field to hold it, and, indeed, one of its garrisons, 11,000 strong, was cut off and captured while illustrating this theory Observing from his headquarters in San Francisco, and with the divisional map spread before him, that Alaska or Russian America had a territorial extent of no less than 578,000 square miles, the Division Commander became vividly impressed, two years ago, with the importance of garrisoning it, and called loudly for more troops. "This division," he said, in his report, "comprises more than one-third of our entire territory," and yet, he added, by way of contrast, "its troops comprise only one-ninth of our army as it is now organized."

And, on the same principle of equitable territorial division of forces, he was distressed at the unprotected state of Alaska. The entire area of his division comprehended 1,235,000 square miles; accordingly Alaska embraced nearly half the territory to be guarded. Could he afford to send many troops thither? He could not, because he had few to spare—only seventy-six companies in all. But what he did was to erect the Territory into a Department, under one of its ablest officers Gen Jeff. C. Davis, to send on four companies at once, to follow them up with others as soon as possible, and to plead and hope that "with the large addition of territory," just made, "the justice of the claims of this coast will be admitted and additional troops will be sent here at as early a date as may be practicable." Meanwhile the troops went up to Sitka under General Davis' command, and, finding it cold in those Arctic regions, warmed themselves up with a preliminary thrashing of the Indians, after which they "burrowed."

And now comes the new commander to change all this. He regards the territorial view of the distribution of troops to be a fallacious one—perhaps a sort of Harper's Ferry theory. He finds that as he has but seven regiments, all told, under his command, and as the military or trading importance of Asiaska is not yet very great, he need not make his small force smaller by detaching so large a force to that region. Indeed, it is hard to imagine what it can do, except to act as a corps of observation, watching on the frontier, lest the North Pole should march down and cross the Arctic Circle.

[illegible] the Alaska [illegible] to a two [illegible] company [illegible] of [illegible] department [illegible] large amount [illegible] authority all [illegible] the results [illegible] in a year [illegible] of the [illegible] enough to be stationed in that land of fog and chills. This news will give a thrill of relief to all the fine fellows now stationed and imprisoned on the coast and islands of Alaska." As General Thomas is now at Sitka, we shall probably soon learn the details of the movements of troops designed to carry out these changes of station.

ENDORSEMENTS.

OLYMPIA, W. T., March 27, 1869.

C. A. WHITE, Esq.—Dear Sir: Having examined your original map, embracing that portion of Washington Territory west of the Cascade Range, I desire to add my testimony to its value Having been engaged for a number of years in the surveys from Cape Flattery to the Head of Puget Sound, I have examined this portion of your map more critically than others, and I take pleasure in vouching for its general correctness.

This map will fill a want that has long been felt, not only among the residents of this Territory, but others, who are desirous of obtaining information of this portion of the "Far West," and I trust that we shall soon see it in a form suitable for general distribution.

JAS. S. LAWSON,
Asst. U. S. C. S.

We endorse the annexed opinion of Jas. S. Lawson, Esq., and will add that Mr Chas. A. White is a practical Surveyor, and has had access to the township maps in the two Land Offices in this Territory, as also the Coast Survey charts; and we can vouch for his map of Washington Territory, west of the Cascade Range of Mountains, as being correct, and the only good map of the same territory that has been made.

IMPORTS.—The unusually large amount of freight brought to Portland by the Oriflamme on her last trip may be looked upon as an indication of the increased demand in Oregon, but the careful observer of cause and effect in commercial matters will not regard it as a sign of permanently increased prosperity, or as evidence of a better state in the money market. For sometime past we have noticed in our San Francisco exchanges the arrivals in that city of enormous quantities of goods from the east and from foreign markets, which are now crowding the warehouses and stores of California. As a consequence of these extensive importations, prices are ruling lower, while the country is drained of money to make payments for more than the demands of the present market. Having large stocks in the warehouses is not an indication of prosperity if the importer is in arrear to the producer. The people of Portland, and of Oregon generally, have stood in their own light by failing to keep more of the money which has been made here in the country. It will be remembered that when Train was here, in a lecture at Philharmonic Hall he read a list of the names of men who had made in the aggregate $4,000,000 in our city, and sent it out of the State. His estimate may have been incorrect, but that much of the money which has been made here has been so disposed of none will deny, and that for articles which could be as easily and in many cases as cheaply made here as elsewhere. We might enumerate some of the articles arriving here by every steamer from San Francisco, the policy of importing which would be like "sending coal to Newcastle," had the money which has enriched Californians and others been kept here, and the proper spirit of enterprise been shown in using it to develop the resources of Oregon. Scarcely a trip is made by sea-going vessels between here and California, but what a portion of the cargo each way consists of leather, butter, wagon and carriage timber, etc., article which are both exported and imported by dealers here. This is certainly a blind policy, and one which cannot fail to redound to our disadvantage. Let Oregon import nothing which can be supplied more cheaply within her own borders, and invest none of the profits of her own trade in increasing supply, and financial depression will be much less like to trouble her people.

DISTINGUISHED ARRIVAL.—The Hon. W. H. Seward, late Secretary of State, arrived in our city by the steamship Active, at half past five o'clock yesterday afternoon. The wharf was crowded with people for sometime before the steamer landed, all anxious to get a view of the distinguished statesman. As the Active reached the dock, the vessels lying there fired a salute, and many of those on board the landing steamer. Governor Woods, Mayor Goldsmith and the members of the Common Council received Mr. Seward and accompanied him to the residence of Ben. Holladay, Esq., escorted by the Brass Band and the Emmet Guard, under Captain Caballo.

On arriving at Mr. Holladay's the Band played "Hail Columbia," after which loud calls were made by the crowd for a speech from the renowned visitor. He appeared upon the porch and made a few brief remarks to the crowd, in substance, that he was glad to stand upon this field of the United States, as he had long desired to do, and see with his own eyes the evidence of our power and magnitude as a free and progressive people. The Chinaman, the Mohamedan and others, he thought, met with difficulties in the way of their advancement because they adhered to ancient customs and forms and refused to adopt the great modern ideas of progress in science and the arts. France, by recognising these ideas, might have saved herself the cost of her intervention in Mexico, Spain the trouble she is having with Cuba, and would be profited by it, if the Old World, admitting the grand principle of progression in the science of government, would abandon the plan of maintaining a European system of colonization on the North American continent. He then expressed a hope that he would meet the people again, and retired.

PAVING.—The work of laying the Nicolson pavement on Front street, between Morrison and Madison, is progressing finely.

BORING.—The boring of the artesian well on the Fair grounds at Salem, is being carried on with some vigor. It has reached the depth of over sixty feet.

GRADING.—The grading on the West Side Railroad is going on, over a mile having been graded since the middle of July.

LUMBER.—A large amount of material is being collected on the site of the United States building, and preparations for the erection of the building are well advanced.

RAILROAD.—The railroad survey by the U. S. schooner Hassler of the Columbia river from the mouth to Cathlamet has been completed. This survey will occupy several months, and will be full and complete.

BY RAILROAD.—Much has been said in our California exchanges about the exhorbitance of freight rates charged by the Pacific Railroad, so much in fact, that many were of the opinion that the opening of the road of no benefit to the coast.

Messrs. L. White & Co., of this city, have ordered goods direct from New York, by rail, and the first stock in that way were received by the Oriflamme, and opened on the wharf. They inform us that the goods arrived in twenty-five days from New York, eighteen less than by the old routes. The cost of transportation was less than is paid in coin to sea-going vessels. This saving of time and money will doubtless induce many of the business men of the city to take advantage. White & Co. will henceforth order their goods direct from New York by rail.

CROPS.—From a farmer living in Yamhill county we learn that there is a considerable part of the grain still standing or hogged, and that much of it will be lost, if not lost on account of the late rains. The wheat crop was sown early in the fall was ripe, and the rain, but of oats and spring wheat some is not yet cut, while much is unthreshed. A continuation of the present spell of wet weather for any great length of time would tend to damage the crops of Oregon to the value of thousands of dollars.

U. S. CIRCUIT COURT.—The proceedings of yesterday were as follows:

United States vs Carlos Quintarp, sentenced to imprisonment for one year.

In the matter of J. F. Nowlen, order was made adjudging him a bankrupt.

United States vs one trunk of merchandise; libel dismissed.

Court adjourned until Monday September 6th 1869.

"LET HIM WHO WEARS A CROWN," or some one else who never wears it says:

"Uneasy lies the head which wears a crown."

But not so with him who buys his hat at the elegant store of Weinhard Bros., corner of Front and Morrison streets. They have a lot of the finest hats and caps ever brought to this city. The latest styles are always to be found at their establishment, at such low rates as will induce everybody to buy who has a head on him.

WHAT'S APPLE.—We can inform the young gentlemen who are stealing the locals in the Evening Commercial that we have given them due credit for all the items taken from that paper; that moreover the local column of the Oregonian on Monday morning was gotten up without our having had so much as a glimpse of Saturday's issue. Our item concerning the Insane Asylum was not taken from the Commercial. That's all.

THE STANDARD.—The standard preparations and flavoring extracts manufactured by Joseph Burnett & Co., Boston, as advertised, are said to be the best in use, and the sales that are being made of them prove the high opinion in which they are held by the public. Mr. D. D. Morse, agent of the manufacturers, is now in our city, and establishing a trade between our customers and the firm he represents.

DOG DAYS.—"Every dog has his day" some one says, and an ordinance of this city says in substance that the day of all dogs in this city which "pay not the tax and wear not the collar" has come, and that this, the last day of dog, is the time when license on "Mongrel, puppy, whelp and hound" must be paid or a "dog's head" will be the consequence. In short, the ordinance will be enforced.

CITY ORDINANCE.—We understand that an amended cow ordinance will be introduced at the next meeting of the Council. The old ordinance created much dissatisfaction which it is proposed to avoid in the new, if it can be done, and at the same time secure people from the annoyance of cows running at large over the city at all times of the day and night.

CONVOCATION.—The Seventeenth Annual Convocation of the Oregon and Washington Mission will be held in Trinity Church on Thursday evening, September 2d, at 7½ o'clock P. M. Divine service on Friday morning at 10 o'clock, with the Holy Communion and address of Bishop Morris. The Convocation will continue in session over Sunday.

JUST US HEAR.—We are sure all classes of our people would be glad to hear Mr. Seward on the topics of the day, while he is in Portland. We are grateful to the arrangements that have been made in this regard, but hope that an opportunity will be given us to listen to this eminent statesman.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The annual term of the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon will begin at Salem next Monday. There will be quite a delegation of attorneys from Portland at the Capital on that occasion. Some very important cases stand on appeal from the Circuit Court of this District.

POINTER AND POINTER.—Hon. A. B. Meacham, now in this city, received the following brief letter from his brother, a day or two since:

"Aug. 25th, 4 P. M.—Mrs. H. J. Meacham, daughter, to the glory, hallelujah! H. J. MEACHAM."

ARRIVAL OF ELWOOD.—This vessel of the Mercer line from New York, is reported outside the Columbia River Bar, by the pilot of the steamship Active. A dense fog has prevented her entering the river heretofore, but she may be expected to arrive at an early day.

IN PORT.—The steamship Active, from Sitka, arrived at half past five yesterday afternoon. Her passenger list and memoranda will be found elsewhere in this paper.

WILL APPEAR.—Some facts in regard to Portland's past, present and future, by an old resident and respected citizen of the city, will appear in to-morrow's issue.

I. O. G. T.—The Grand Lodge of the order of Good Templars of Oregon will hold their annual session at Vancouver in October.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Oriflamme will sail for San Francisco, from this port, to-day, at six o'clock P. M.

SITKA.—Our readers will find an interesting speech of Hon. W. H. Seward, at Sitka, A. T., on the first page of this paper.

STOPPED WORK.—The rains have stopped the work on some important improvements going on in the city.

SAILS.—The Mount Taylor will leave San Francisco for Portland to-morrow.

LADIES, TAKE NOTICE.—MRS. C. LEVY has just received per steamer Oriflamme, via Pacific Railroad from New York, the first shipment of STAPLE and FANCY DRY GOODS for the Fall Trade, and as they are direct from first hands she is enabled to offer them at unprecedentedly Low Prices.

Use KANE'S IMPERIAL CONDENSED SOAP. It washes without rubbing. For sale by Allen & Lewis, Corbett & McGlenn, R. H. Sneath and all retailers.

Letter from Senator Brownlow

To the Editor of the Washington Chronicle:

SIR: I wish to say a few words through your journal to the Republicans of the nation generally, and also to the President and his Cabinet particularly, touching the late Tennessee election.

DeWitt C. Senter is elected Governor of Tennessee by a majority ranging from 60,000 to 70,000, having carried East, Middle and West Tennessee, the three grand divisions of the State. That there were many fraudulent votes cast I have no doubt, but the majority is quite too large to be set to the account of fraudulent votes.

I again take occasion to indorse Governor Senter as a sound and reliable Republican, the charge of his enemies to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Legislature, though not Republican, is not Democratic: and, therefore, will not elect Andrew Johnson to the Senate, but will fall back upon some such conservative, old line Whig as Governor Neill S. Brown or Bailie Peyton, and, in my judgment, will adopt the Fifteenth Amendment.

Stokes and Butler, stung by defeat, and by the loss of both their Congressional Districts, which have been carried by the Senter party, it is said by their friends, will proceed at once to Washington to have all Federal officers in Tennessee who voted for Senter instantly removed and Stokes' Republicans appointed in their places. Thousands of as good Republicans as Tennessee affords voted for Senter as a Republican candidate; and to day a majority of the Republicans of Tennessee are Senter men. They have never sent delegations to Washington to invoke the aid of the Administration in the contest and they will not do so now for the sake of keeping friends in office. I write in no spirit of dictation; but in that of friendly cautionary advice. We think, here, in Tennessee, that it was quite enough for members of the Cabinet to send electioneering letters during the canvass, declaring their preference for Stokes; and, now, to turn Republican candidates out of office for daring to vote for Senter as their choice of the two Republican candidates for Governor will look to us, from our stand point, very much like bringing the patronage of the Government into a conflict with "the freedom of elections." We think, here, that no competent and honest man should be removed from office because he voted for Senter or Stokes, both being Republicans, and we shall be greatly disappointed if the Republican party of the whole nation do not take the same view of the subject. In plain English, what we ask is this: that in the removal of Senter Republicans from office the same rule shall be applied as in the removal of Stokes Republicans or any other Republicans, i. e., that they shall only be removed for incompetency growing out of inefficiency, unfaithfulness, or dishonesty.

In conclusion, I am not by any means alone in the holding and expressing of these views, and, further, in uttering the additional opinion that the Administration should make haste slowly to drive from its support a majority of the Republicans of Tennessee, by pursuing the prospective policy which will be urged upon it by Stokes, Butler, and a few disappointed politicians.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
W. G. BROWNLOW.

GERRIT SMITH ON PROHIBITION.—The veteran reformer of Peterborough has lately published one of his characteristic letters on prohibition, which, while taking strong ground in favor of it, and against what he calls the "dram shop," contains some good hints for our temperance men. He says in regard to lager beer:

Although it may be proper, and indeed very important, for the friends of temperance to dissuade from drinks which do but dull the drinker, Government nevertheless is to concern itself about no other drinks than those which crazy him and make him a fearful peril to the public safety. Drinks which merely stupefy are no more to be noticed by Government than are dinners which merely stupefy. It is to be regretted that any prohibitory law names the proscribed drinks. Intoxicating or unintoxicating should be the only legal distinction between the proscribed and permitted drinks; and the law should leave it to the jury to decide in each case of prosecution whether the drink in question is or is not intoxicating—is or is not erasing—is or is not a drink which makes the drinker perilous to the public. The difference at this point in different prosecutions would be a small evil compared with the law's declaring that drinks of this or that name are to be held, in advance, to be intoxicating. The leaving of this, the chief question, to a jury—to the people—would be a highly popular feature in the law.

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

TO SALOON KEEPERS and DEALERS IN SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS:

We particularly call your attention to Sec. 48 of the Internal Revenue Laws, in relation to the cancellation of stamps on empty packages:

Whenever you draw off or empty a package of liquor that has upon it an Inspector's Stamp, be sure to obliterate or deface the stamp.

We give you this caution to save you trouble or expense, and perhaps fine, believing that the majority of dealers have not been informed, and are unaware of the consequences resulting from a violation of the above mentioned section of the Law. E. MARTIN & CO.,

FOR HONG KONG, CHINA.

THE

The Daily Oregonian.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 31, 1869.

William H. Seward.

There have been a few men who, by the eminence of their abilities and the acknowledged distinction of their public careers, have obtained the respect of all classes and parties in our country. Though they have sometimes been the objects of detraction, this, at last, is forgotten, and citizens speak of them with veneration and receive them wherever they go with respectful welcome. One of the few men of this eminent class is William H. Seward. We are glad to believe that there is not to-day a person bearing the title of American citizen who would not extend a heart-felt welcome to the venerable statesman who has now come among the people of Oregon.

If tried by popular judgment there are few who would not express the opinion that Mr. Seward has committed errors; but we believe there are none who would not overlook these for the good of his whole life. Our people can greet him as a statesman should be greeted by citizens of a Republic he has served with faithful intent and unsurpassed ability for thirty-five years. The Pacific States owe him a special debt for services in their behalf. And Oregon, we are sure, will not be behind the rest in giving him welcome.

The "Oregonian" and Its Assailants.

The Salem Press takes it upon itself to say that,—

> The OREGONIAN has upon all occasions shown itself the advocate of the exclusive rights of wealth, monopoly and special privileges. Every movement to place the bond-holder on the same footing with poor Government creditors has had its most bitter hostility; every measure to protect rich monopolies at the expense of individual industry and enterprise, its ardent support; for every combination of laborers to reduce the hours of service, to increase their wages, or to protect themselves from Chinese competition or unjust exactions, it has only had sneers and insults.

We do not expect fairer treatment than this at the hands of any portion of the Jacobin press. The fact that the entire Jacobin press of Oregon continually make the OREGONIAN the sole object of their attacks, and that their columns are entirely filled with malignant distribes against this paper, would indicate that they find the OREGONIAN something of an obstacle in the way of the propagation of their loose, licentious and disorganizing doctrines. The only reason why it is asserted that this paper has shown itself "the advocate of the exclusive rights of wealth, monopoly and special privileges," is that it has always maintained the right of the owners of property to control that property, to manage their own business, and to conduct their lawful operations without interference from those who have no interest in them and no stake in the country. For example, we have held that the owners of factories have the right to employ any sort of labor they choose, to run their machinery in any manner they see fit, or not run it at all if it it don't suit them to do so; and that a set of lazy, worthless demagogues, who hope to obtain political advantage by agitating the matter, have no business to meddle with it. Our advocacy of the claims of the bondholder has been confined simply to the doctrine that the Government should honestly pay its debts; that the idea of repudiation should not be entertained, and that Government securities could not be subjected to taxation. As to laboring men, we have always asserted that they have an equal right to combine, either to reduce the hours of labor or to increase their wages; but that employers have an equal right, either singly or in combination, to take care of their interests. As to "Chinese competition," we have merely to say that "sneers and insults" are the only answers which any white man, who is afraid that a Chinaman will get the better of him, deserves.

The stand which we have taken is far more friendly to the interests of the producing class — than is that taken by agrarian demagogues who endeavor to excite needless antagonism between labor and capital in the hope of turning the result to party account. Intelligent laboring men know that they can gain nothing by railing at those who are rich, but that they can make steady progress towards a competence by industry, frugality and sobriety, and in no other way. We have no doubt but we could gain the favor of the Salem Press and its co-laborers by joining in their jacobinical assaults on property, and adopting their doctrine of "equalizing the fortunes of mankind." But we most decidedly decline to join in any such scheme of folly and evil.

In General.

The Democratic press are much at loggerheads on the subject of Chinese immigration. The New York World, some time since, came out in an article claiming that the Democratic press favored it. But the ink was scarcely dry before the Albany Argus denied it. Since then the Cincinnati Enquirer has come back from its first position and indorsed the position of the Argus. The Chicago Times sides with the World in the contest.

President Grant enforces the laws with spirit and decision. The following is his order to Marshal Barlow of New York in regard to the man Pratt whom the State authorities made an attempt to take away from the custody of the United States: "I hereby direct you to maintain the laws of the United States, and to resist all efforts to take J. H. Pratt from your custody, whether by order of Judge McCunn or any other officer of any of the State Courts. I also authorize and request you to use all means to resist the attempt to effect your arrest and stop the execution of the laws of the United States."

The New York Times, in an article on the need of a great university in the United States, makes the statement that, "our colleges during the last generation, though they have multiplied in number, have absolutely deteriorated in character. They have lowered their standard of attaintments, relaxed the rigor of their examinations; have enlarged their number of studies, only to make research more difficult and shallowness more respectable; and the consequences has been that instead of rising, they have been for the last twenty years rather sinking in the public respect and confidence." This is a pretty broad assertion. Do the facts warrant it?

The Chicago Sorosis quarreled soon after its first organization. One branch of it has just got into court. It secured the establishment of a restaurant where the members took their dinners and tea. It came to be the practice to give and take credit, the keeper being a woman with a small property. Some of them incurred heavy bills, and when the keeper hinted at pay they took umbrage and their departure. The restaurant is closed, and the woman, now poor, is vainly trying to recover her debts.

A Connecticuter invested a dollar and a half in a rattlesnake, opened a "show" at ten cents a head, and cleared about $6 a day.

The past and the present—The Woman of Rome "Here are my jewels." The "Woman of the period" "Go to my house and Katie will show you the little brats"

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO AUGUST 30.

Chicago and New York.

CHICAGO, Aug 30.—Patrick Conlin, keeper of an Irish boarding house in West Division street, was shot dead last night by Michael Pendergast, Conlin's wife's brother. Conlin had been in the habit of cruelly beating his wife. He administered an unusually severe chastisement on Friday, which probably caused the killing. Pendergast was not arrested.

The Tribune's New York special says Dexter made a mile in 2 minutes 17½ seconds, under saddle, on the Fashion Course, on Friday. The track being freshly harrowed, the horse was compelled to go wide to get a good track.

It is understood that the Fenian Congress considers it inexpedient to attack Canada at the present time.

At the session, on Saturday, a proposition was read from an Italian desperado to assassinate Prince Arthur while in Canada. It was voted down unanimously. The member offering it complained that he did so at the request of a constituent.

The Republican's Washington special says the Cabinet meeting on Tuesday will consider the conduct of Minister Browne and the Chinese treaty. The President is known to be much displeased with the conduct of Minister Browne. There is considerable speculation in regard to who will fill the vacancy, the post being regarded as too important to remain long unfilled. Among the names mentioned is that of General Dodge of the Union Pacific Railroad, who is known to have planned a visit to China following Burmingame's return. Hon. W. B. Mann, of Philadelphia, is mentioned by parties interested in the East India Telegraph Company of which Gov. Curtin is President. The other names mentioned are John D. Baldwin, editor of the Worcester Spy, and John Russell Young, late of the New York Tribune. Congress will be asked at the next session to make Pekin a first class mission.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—A meeting of the officers of the boat clubs of this city is proposed for next Thursday, to consider measures for giving the Harvards a rousing reception on their return home.

At a meeting of the Northwestern Sangerbund, yesterday, further preparations were made for the Humboldt festival. It was resolved to cooperate with the Philharmonic celebration of the one hundreth birthday of Beethovan with a monster concert in Central Park, on a larger scale than recently given.

The Tribune's London special, speaking of the international regatta and why we were beaten, says it was for many good reasons. In style, form, knowledge of rowing, diet, methods of training and mode of instruction, the Harvards were utterly inferior to the Oxfords. Had the race been won by them the credit would have belonged to Loring, captain and despot of the crew. It being lost, he must equally bear the blame. A man of extreme self-reliance, which partially neutralized his high qualities of intelligence, generous divination and real capability, but his experience is limited to a knowledge of American rowing, he persisted in adhering to the American method, and would teach the crew himself from inside the boat, a thing radically impossible. He would not change the diet of the crew, although the climate required change, and the diet manifestly impaired his own and Simmon's powers. It is sheer madness to go on eating currants and milk in this or any climate; but even diarrhea and other symptoms could not effect a change in the captain's stubborn opinion. To have taken Blakee, or any good coacher, on a steamer during the last five weeks would have added twenty per cent to the Harvards' chances. The Harvards, upon their arrival, had nearly every fault of a young crew. Good coaching would, in three weeks, have eradicated them. Loring to the last believed that the rowing could be taught inside the boat.

The Harvards' stroke waf falsely quick and fatally irregular during the race, varying from 46 to 38, and varied often twice in 60 seconds. With the coxswain no living crew could have pulled the stroke with which Loring led off, through four miles. In fact the crew was rowed to a stand still in less than two miles. With their power gone, after that it was only heroic courage and resolution that carried them through. The system that exhausts a crew at the end of two miles in a four mile race cannot be sound.

English papers contain accounts of the murder of an Italian Countess in a night train between Naples and Rome. She was alone in a first class carriage and is supposed to have been shot by an officer who claimed to be in love with her.

WILKESBARRE, Aug 29.—Late in the afternoon a fire broke out in Pine Ridge colliery, above this place. The fire caught at the entrance of the mine and burned with fearful rapidity. The wildest excitement prevailed, thirty men being at the bottom of the mine. The fire originated from an explosion in a fire damp. The superintendent of the mine reached here at midnight and reported that all the men were rescued alive. The mine is still burning, but the men being rescued, it will be smothered out.

THE EQUALIZER!

Treating Disease by Vacuum!

DR. H. A. BODMAN

HAVING PURCHASED HADFIELD'S EQUALIZER and the Patent Right for Multnomah county, would respectfully inform his friends and the public generally that he is prepared to treat successfully those Chronic cases on whom all other means of cure have failed.

Having used this Instrument in connection with his former practice for about three months, he is satisfied that it will accomplish all that is claimed for it in curing Chronic Disease. He does not believe in the principle of advertising cures, but any number of such may be seen on record at his office, consisting principally of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Curvature of the Spine, Nervous Debility, Dyspepsia, Weak Chests, Asthma, Narrow Chests, Weak Lungs, Weak Backs, Weak, Stiff and Rheumatic Limbs, Sciatica, Spasms, Epilepsy, Palsy, St. Vitus' Dance, Prolapsus Uteri, Obstructed Menstruation with all their concomitant Diseases, Impotency and all kinds of weaknesses of the Generative Organs. Spermatorhœa confidently cured in from four to six weeks with or without medicine.

He uses no other remedies when necessary, but the Equalizer generally performs the cure without the aid of any medicines whatever. It brings a greater supply of blood and nutrition to all weak parts, thus creating new life and tone and health, and strength in those parts. It breaks up congestion and inflammation by equalizing the circulation through out every part of the system.

Give it a fair trial and you will be satisfied with the results. It has been examined by thousands of physicians of all Schools of Medicine, and there has not been one dissenting voice to the correctness of the principle, all acknowledge that it fills a vacuum in the Science of Medicine.
